The CNAC is a company that was incorporated on June 5, 1998 under the Canada Business Corporations Act and operates under the regulatory oversight of the CRTC. The primary role of the CNAC is to administer the selection and funding of a neutral administrator who performs the functions of Canadian numbering administration for the Canadian telecommunications industry. In addition, the CNAC pays the Canadian share of the costs of the North American Numbering Plan Administration (NANPA). The cost of performing this function is funded by Canadian telecommunications service providers (TSPs) who benefit from numbering resources within Canada. For additional information see http://www.cnac.ca/cnac/cna_consortium.htm.
